USAID
FROM THE AMERICAN PEOPLE

The United States Agency for International Development (USAID) is the principal U.S. development agency providing assistance to improve the lives of millions worldwide. USAID is focusing its efforts on helping partner countries establish the policy environments, improved governance, and financial incentives necessary to set their economies on a low emissions path to sustainable development and reduce vulnerability to climate change impacts. To respond to the threat of global climate change, USAID is working to spur reductions in greenhouse gas emissions and promote climate change adaptation in vulnerable countries and communities.

To achieve the goals of the Presidential Initiative on Global Climate Change, USAID investments are focused on three climate change pillars:

Adaptation

- Helping communities build resilience

Clean Energy

- Supporting low emission economic growth

Sustainable Landscapes

- Conserving forests and reducing deforestation
